The Cornovii Peoples Of Roman

The Cornovii is the name by which two, or three, tribes were known in Roman Britain. One tribe was in the area centred on present-day Shropshire, one was in Caithness in northernmost Scotland, and there was probably one in Cornwall. The name has appeared in ancient sources in various forms, such as Cornavii, Cornabii, and Curnavii.

Cornovii - Wikipedia

The territory of the Cornovii was centred on Shropshire, but extended into Staffordshire, Herefordshire and parts of Cheshire, Clwyd and Worcestershire. The book focusses on the area south of Shrewsbury, but is less informative on the tribe's northern territory, probably owing to the lack of sources.

The Cornovii are a surprisingly obscure tribe, given that they lay well within the boundaries of the Roman province and their civitas-capital was one of the largest towns in Britain. They share their tribal name—which means ‘the people of the horn’—with a Scottish tribe, but there is no reason to think they shared a common ancestry.
